City Planners Issue Ultimatum to SP Co.

Redwood City Planning Commission gave the Southern Pacific Co. 30 days this week to present an optional proposal for the installation of plan lines leading to the extension of Franklin St. from Jefferson Ave. to the SP depot.

The commission is setting lines through property owned by the SP. Once the plan lines are adopted the owners will be prohibited from constructing any structures on land the city proposes to condemn for the street project. There is no street at present paralleling the west side of the railroad between Jefferson and the depot except El Camino Real. The street proposed would run between the tracks and ECR and cut through Butcher Field.

SP representatives this week advocated the formation of an engineering committee made up of their representatives and city representatives. This committee, the SP men urged, should be given 60 days to work out a new set of plan lines. The SP proposal was rejected and the railroad was given just 30 days to bring in new suggestions of its own.

The commission also: Held a second hearing at which there was no objection to four amendments to the zoning ordinance. These amendments would permit crop and tree farming in residential areas with use permits, permit public or private parking lots in residential areas adjacent to commercial or industrial zones, permit erection of a second residence on lots in single family or duplex zones where one house already exists on the rear of lots, and permit no amusement park or recreational area anywhere in the city without a use permit.

Schools to Back March of Dimes

The March of Dimes campaign which starts this Friday will receive the full support of San Mateo County's school children, according to Pansy Jewett Abbott, county school superintendent.

"Infantile paralysis," she said, "is one of the dreaded diseases of children, particularly those of school age. It is important that this urgent appeal for funds to fight polio be given the annual support not only of the students, but also of their parents."

T. J. Hallinan, president of the San Mateo County chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said that over 46,000 folders telling the need for contributions to this year's March of Dimes drive is being distributed to pupils in the entire Peninsula area.

Dr. Harold Chope, county health director warned that citizens must prepare now for such emergencies as that which occurred last year when county polio funds were depleted due to the infantile paralysis epidemic last fall. It was Chope's opinion that contributions to this year's drive must double those of 1948.

State Legislature Starts Work on First Bills of 1949 Session

BY MORRIS LANDSBERG

SACRAMENTO (AP)—First bills of the 1949 session started on their way through the state legislature today.

Both houses, however, gave more attention to investigations—into the loan shark issue, political activities of a state contact man, a new four-year college in Los Angeles and a rapid transit plan for the southern metropolitan area.

Most of the 5000 bills expected to be introduced in January will be acted upon after the February recess. But assembly committees last night sent out three hurry-up measures with favorable recommendations. These would:

Require secondary schools to give instruction, in grades 9 through 12, on how to drive a car. The objective is better drivers and fewer accidents.

Help California cities combat polio by making it easier to build up sewage disposal systems. Proponents said inadequate facilities draw flies capable of carrying the polio virus.

Authorize a four-year state college in either Orange County or Southeastern Los Angeles County, estimated to cost $8,500,000. A house interim committee also heard testimony on a proposed state-supported college of applied arts and sciences in Los Angeles. The department of education balked at the idea of local control for the school. The small loan question—tied in with Warren administration efforts to put a definite ceiling on loans over $300—turned up on three legislative fronts.

Assemblyman Ralph C. Dills, Compton, announced he was ready to try and withdraw from rules committee his resolution to permit a special investigation of the small loan business.

The committee on Monday held up action to give Corporation Comr. Edwin M. Daugherty a chance to answer criticism of his enforcement of the Small Loan Act. It also summoned

James Monroe Jefferson—who now figures in two investigations. Governor Warren has attacked Jefferson as lobbyist for the "high raters" fighting his anti-usury program.

Meanwhile, the senate offered the assembly an opportunity to bypass Dills' move for a house committee interim study of personal property brokers. It proposed a joint senate-house investigation under a resolution adopted yesterday.

Jefferson's name popped up in a hearing by the assembly interim highways committee. He and Kirt MacBride, publisher of a Sacramento newsletter, were called in to verify printed statements. Jefferson also writes a private political commentary.

These statements were to the effect that Harold Norton, special representative of the public works department, went out campaigning for the senate reappropriation measure—Proposition 13—on the November, 1948, ballot. Was this a violation of the Hatch Act? (The act prohibits political activities by public employees paid, all or in part, from federal funds.)

Sen. George J. Hatfield, Merced County, came forward and told newsmen he had put Norton to work campaigning against Proposition 13, which was defeated.

But he said Norton did it during a month-long vacation, and he showed an opinion by the legislative counsel saying there was no Hatch Act violation.

Even so, the committee told Norton to come back Saturday morning with counsel. The public works officer, frequently in the lobby during legislative sessions, refused to answer questions without consulting his attorney.

Lincoln's Gettysburg address has endured as one of history's greatest orations but the audience who heard him then was disappointed because he spoke only two minutes.
